Communicating Across the Rainbow Bridge

I'm often asked if I can communicate with a pet that has passed.

The answer is yes. When your pet passes, only their physical body ends, their energetic being (aka the soul) still exists. That is the energy that I connect to when communicating. However the messages I receive may not be what you'd expect. Let me explain further.

The animals are always excited to speak to their people. In my 16+ years of doing this, I've never had an animal that has passed tell me they did not want to speak to their family. In most cases they arrive early and I have to tell them to wait because I've got a designated time that I'm supposed to call their person(s).

The first bits of information I receive are usually how they feel or felt physically or emotionally. Many times, I'll get a visual of them running, jumping, spinning, or even dancing. This is my signal that they had a physical ailment in life that restricted their movement. Because they are now running, jumping, etc, they are letting me know to communicate that they no longer have that restriction. Sometimes I feel what they felt physically in life, but most of the time the focus is on what they can do now, not their health issues when they were alive.

They will often share random bits of information, such as their favorite toy, food, beds, or things that were important to them in life. I once had a dog show me a visual of a giant 4 foot bone. When I relayed the information to the person, they started laughing and told me the story of how entertained the dog was and they were, especially when the dog tried to get through the door with the oversize bone. Although it may seem silly, sharing the quirky bits of information serves a very important purpose; it lets the person know that it is their animal I'm communicating with. So while the information may not be life altering or full of wisdom from the other side, it is validation and important for the animal and their family.

Many people ask if their animal is upset or mad at them, especially if they had to put the animal to sleep. The answer has NEVER been yes. Unlike us, animals are not scared of the idea of crossing the rainbow bridge. The only fear involved from their perspective is how their family is doing now that they've crossed over. Many times the animal comes back in spirit form to check on their family. Sometimes they will even guide events from the other side to bring a new pet to their family to make them happy again.

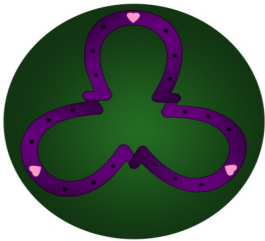

Another common question is did they know how much they were loved? The answer has always been YES. Regardless of the circumstances surrounding their passing, they only communicate their love for their family. So if you have any guilt about putting down a beloved pet, let it go. There is no anger, only love, love, love, hugs and sloppy kisses from the other side.
